Episode 15

Garbage In, Garbage Out

What we put into our bodies fuels everything we do, and it's more than just the food we eat. Koady, Jake and TC all have dreams of making it big in music, and their band (The Shorebirds) has real potential. But before they can work in concert on their dreams, they have to work individually on how they feed those dreams – from the food they eat to how they deal with distractions and disappointment.

Join the band as they get ready to hit the stage for their big premier, and as they learn how to fine tune their instruments and themselves.

Jake

Jake doesn't take life too seriously, which can be a good thing. However, he does need to take his diet seriously if he wants to succeed. Good food going into the body can help him get to where he wants to be. Greasy bags of junk food? Not so much.

Koady

Sometimes the best way to tune in is to turn off – your phone. It would serve Koady well to spend a little less time online and a little more time in rehearsal.

TC

When your day is out of tune, what do you do? Do you take a step back, or do you let it get the better of you? How TC deals with life's little struggles will play an important part in how he seizes life's big opportunities.

Marti

Marti is the band's energetic manager, and she has her share of lessons to learn about letting the good energy in and keeping the bad energy at arm's length – or at paw's length.
